

Risk Disclosure

High-Risk Investment: Forex margin trading involves significant risks associated with changes in political conditions, economic factors, acts of nature, and other unforeseen events. These factors can impact the prices of currencies or even their availability for trading. Speculative trading poses challenges, even for experienced traders who understand all associated risks. It is advisable to only involve funds in trading that would not adversely affect a trader's financial well-being. It's important to note that in forex trading, if the market continuously moves against a trader's position, there is a risk of losing all deposited funds.

Other Risks: We do not guarantee the volume of trades or profits that can be made with any portfolio of instruments at any given time. When using a financial instrument, clients should acknowledge and accept the high risk of losses and damages and declare their willingness to take on this risk. Clients should invest in financial instruments only if they fully understand and comprehend the associated risks.

Web Trading Risks: There are inherent risks associated with internet-based trading, including the failure of hardware, software, and internet connection. Since we do not control internet providers, their equipment and technology, internet connection speed, or reliability, nor the configuration or reliability of clients' equipment or its connection, we cannot be held responsible for communication failures, distortions, or delays when trading via the internet.

Software Risks: The StagFX Trader trading software employs a sophisticated order entry mechanism and order tracking system. While we endeavor to execute orders at requested prices, it's essential to understand that internet trading does not necessarily reduce risks associated with currency trading. All quotes and trades are subject to the terms and conditions outlined in our Customer Agreement.

By engaging in trading activities with StagFX, clients acknowledge and accept these risks. It is imperative to carefully consider these risks and consult with a financial advisor if necessary before participating in any trading activities.

For any inquiries or clarification regarding the risks associated with trading, please contact us at Support@stagfx.com.

Last updated: 20-02-2024